What to Take

Snacks and Drinks

Okay sure, the stadium is a glass, container and bottle-free zone, but there's no rule to say that you can't bring a cheap, fabric cool bag in with you. The stadium is full of fast food vendors, as well as those walking around the stands selling fast food like pies and ice creams, and quite frankly, demolishing a piece of greasy fried chicken sounds like the dream when you're several litres of beer down. But you'll be giving yourself a pat on the back for packing a quick cheese sarnie and a bag of Doritos for yourself once you take a look at the queue for KFC. This goes for water, too (it's all about staying hydrated!). We've found it handy in the past to use emergency water bags from Living Plaza which can store up to a litre of water, ultimately saving both pennies and time spent in huge lines.

See the full list of prohibited items at the Sevens here.

Wet Wipes/Hand Sanitiser

Obviously, with so many people attending the games, the Sevens isn't going to be cleanest place. Already carrying half of the South Stand around the ankles of your animal onesie, cleanliness probably isn't going to be at the forefront of your mind, but hand sanitiser is about to become your best friend once you've broken the dreaded seal...

Sunscreen/Hat

Odds are your costume has come with a head piece of sorts, but don't forget to slap on some sunscreen before leaving home. With little coverage for the majority of the stands, it's likely you'll to burn, so lotion up before leaving home and be done with it!

Bum Bag

This one is the mother of all Sevens hacks. Don't bother bringing a shoulder bag with you – it's going to get destroyed, covered in beer, or left under a seat. Clip a bum bag around your waist and only take the essentials. Cash, phone (best to pop this one in a zip lock bag, I've been known to drop my phone in the pint glass sat around my neck) tissues, paracetamol, hydration salts (a mid-day life saver if you're hoping to make it on to Wan Chai) and Imodium – if you've seen those toilet stalls past lunch time you'll know why this one's made the list.

Alternative Activities

If braving the South Stand just isn't your thing, or you're looking for a slightly tamer, more family-friendly orientated Sevens this year then there are heaps of alternatives to chugging warm pints...

Game stalls

There's tons of fun things happening across the weekend, and this includes trying your hand at the game and entertainment stalls where you can win cool prizes.

Fan Stands

Fan stands are dotted around the stadium, and are a great place to buy souvenirs, memorabilia and rugby merchandise like the official Hong Kong Sevens and team jerseys as well as rugby balls which tend to go down a storm (and sell out fast!) – a perfect tool for collecting signatures too.

Half Time Entertainment

It's been announced that American rock band Smash Mouth will be bringing the half-time entertainment for this year's games! Expect classics such as I'm a Believer and All Star – sure to have the stands signing along.

Mini Rugby

Whether you're heading down early to get into the South Stand or to set up camp in the West, check out the cool mini rugby tournaments held on pitch (schedule to be released soon) in the early hours – cute!

Around Town

If you haven't managed to bag yourself a ticket, don't stress. This year it's easy to get into the spirit and soak up the Sevens atmosphere around town. Round up the stragglers and head on over to one of these happenings, set up in the front row or bag yourself an awesome foodie deal...

Kely Support

On a slightly more serious note, this one needs to be addressed. The Hong Kong Sevens is an incredible weekend with family and friends, and there's no doubt that the stories will crop up in the pub for days afterwards. But with thousands of people attending and the temptation to really over do the alcohol is at every turn, so it can be reassuring to know that Kely Support Group is on hand to help with all drug and alcohol related incidents, providing support and treatment to anyone in need – no questions asked. Remember to drink responsibly and have fun!
